Increasing the basic personal amount—the amount that an individual can earn without paying federal income tax—so that a single individual can earn $10,000 more without paying federal income tax, to $41,500 for 2006, to help working Canadians. The credit amount will double to $1,000 as of January 1, 2007.

Increasing the basic personal amount—the amount that an individual can earn without paying federal income tax—so that a single individual can earn $10,000 more without paying federal income tax, to $41,500 for 2006, to help working Canadians. The credit amount will double to $1,000 as of January 1, 2007.

Increasing the basic personal amount—the amount that an individual can earn without paying federal income tax—so that a single individual can earn $10,000 more without paying federal income tax, to $41,500 for 2006, to help working Canadians. The credit amount will double to $1,000 as of January 1, 2007.

Increasing the basic personal amount—the amount that an individual can earn without paying federal income tax—so that a single individual can earn $10,000 more without paying federal income tax, to $41,500 for 2006, to help working Canadians. The credit amount will double to $1,000 as of January 1, 2007.

Increasing the basic personal amount—the amount that an individual can earn without paying federal income tax—so that a single individual can earn $10,000 more without paying federal income tax, to $41,500 for 2006, to help working Canadians. The credit amount will double to $1,000 as of January 1, 2007.

Increasing the basic personal amount—the amount that an individual can earn without paying federal income tax—so that a single individual can earn $10,000 more without paying federal income tax, to $41,500 for 2006, to help working Canadians. The credit amount will double to $1,000 as of January 1, 2007.

Increasing the basic personal amount—the amount that an individual can earn without paying federal income tax—so that a single individual can earn $10,000 more without paying federal income tax, to $41,500 for 2006, to help working Canadians. The credit amount will double to $1,000 as of January 1, 2007.

Increasing the basic personal amount—the amount that an individual can earn without paying federal income tax—so that a single individual can earn $10,000 more without paying federal income tax, to $41,500 for 2006, to help working Canadians. The credit amount will double to $1,000 as of January 1, 2007.

Increasing the basic personal amount—the amount that an individual can earn without paying federal income tax—so that a single individual can earn $10,000 more without paying federal income tax, to $41,500 for 2006, to help working Canadians. The credit amount will double to $1,000 as of January 1, 2007.

Increasing the basic personal amount—the amount that an individual can earn without paying federal income tax—so that a single individual can earn $10,000 more without paying federal income tax, to $41,500 for 2006, to help working Canadians. The credit amount will double to $1,000 as of January 1, 2007.

A new $500 tax credit to help about 1.9 million post-

Expanding eligibility for student loans to more students from

A new tools tax deduction of up to $500 for tradespeople

Budget 2006 proposes to:
• Increase the maximum annual Child Disability Benefit to $2,300 from $2,044, effective July 1, 2006.
• Extend eligibility for the Child Disability Benefit to middle- and higher-income families caring for a disability tax-credit-eligible child, including virtually all families that are currently eligible for the CTC tax benefit, effective July 1, 2006.
• Increase the maximum amount of the refundable medical expense tax credit (RMETC) to $5,000 from $3,000 for the 2006 tax year.

HELPING STUDENTS, APPRENTICES AND TRADESPEOPLE

Budget 2006 proposes the following measures for students:
• A new $500 tax credit to help about 1.9 million post-secondary students with their textbook costs. For a typical full-time student, the tax credit will represent a yearly benefit of about $80.

HELPING PUBLIC TRANSIT USERS

Budget 2006 delivers on the Government’s commitment to reduce by half the 1997 Right of Permanent Residence Fee. Effective immediately, this fee is reduced to $490. The Government will consult with a small group of experts in immigration settlement funding to determine the amount they would receive in this case is $1,028.

HELPING PERSONS WITH DISABILITIES AND PENSIONERS

Persons With Disabilities
Budget 2006 proposes to:
• Increase the maximum amount of the Child Disability Benefit to $2,300 per year, effective July 1, 2006.

HELPING NEWCOMERS TO CANADA

Budget 2006 delivers on the Government’s commitment to reduce by half the 1997 Right of Permanent Residence Fee. Effective immediately, this fee is reduced to $490. The Government will consult with a small group of experts in immigration settlement funding to determine the amount they would receive in this case is $1,028.

HELPING PUBLIC TRANSIT USERS

Budget 2006 delivers on the Government’s commitment to reduce by half the 1997 Right of Permanent Residence Fee. Effective immediately, this fee is reduced to $490. The Government will consult with a small group of experts in immigration settlement funding to determine the amount they would receive in this case is $1,028.

HELPING PUBLIC TRANSIT USERS

Budget 2006 delivers on the Government’s commitment to reduce by half the 1997 Right of Permanent Residence Fee. Effective immediately, this fee is reduced to $490. The Government will consult with a small group of experts in immigration settlement funding to determine the amount they would receive in this case is $1,028.

HELPING PUBLIC TRANSIT USERS

Budget 2006 delivers on the Government’s commitment to reduce by half the 1997 Right of Permanent Residence Fee. Effective immediately, this fee is reduced to $490. The Government will consult with a small group of experts in immigration settlement funding to determine the amount they would receive in this case is $1,028.

HELPING PUBLIC TRANSIT USERS

Budget 2006 delivers on the Government’s commitment to reduce by half the 1997 Right of Permanent Residence Fee. Effective immediately, this fee is reduced to $490. The Government will consult with a small group of experts in immigration settlement funding to determine the amount they would receive in this case is $1,028.

HELPING PUBLIC TRANSIT USERS

Budget 2006 delivers on the Government’s commitment to reduce by half the 1997 Right of Permanent Residence Fee. Effective immediately, this fee is reduced to $490. The Government will consult with a small group of experts in immigration settlement funding to determine the amount they would receive in this case is $1,028.